

Nathalie is a physician and currently serves as a Senior Advisor of the National Program for Bioconvergence at the Israeli Innovation Authority. She is an industry leader in the digital health and AI in healthcare ecosystems in Israel. She was the Founder and Director of the Innovation Center for Digital Health ARC at Sheba Medical Center.

Nathalie spent 14 years as a physician at Harvard Medical School, with 4 years as an Associate Medical Director at MACIPA in Cambridge, MA, where she led strategic projects to implement new technologies within the organization, reducing readmissions and moving care into the community.

She leads an educational practicum-based innovation and entrepreneurship program for medical residents at the Israeli Medical Association, where she integrates more than 20 residents into 20 startups each year. Nathalie is additionally a senior advisor in digital health for Venture Capital Firms.