

Matthew Hallsworth
NIHR Office for Clinical Research Infrastructure

Dr Matthew Hallsworth is Head of External Relations for the NIHR Office for Clinical Research Infrastructure (NOCRI). He leads on external stakeholder relations, including engagement with the pharmaceutical industry.

NOCRI works with companies to support collaboration with the expert investigators and research facilities funded by the UK Department of Health, from early-phase translational medicine through to later-phase clinical trials.

Prior to NOCRI Matthew was Head of Communications at the UK Clinical Research Collaboration – a partnership of government, charities, industry, the NHS, academia, regulators and patients focused on improving the clinical research environment in the UK.

Matthew has also had Research Management roles at the medical charity Asthma UK and for the Department of Health's National R&D Programme.

During his earlier career Matthew was a Research Fellow in Respiratory Medicine at Guy's & St Thomas' Hospitals, London, where he completed his PhD on the mechanisms of inflammation in asthma and allergic disease.
