

Thierry ZYLBERBERG is Executive Vice President of the Orange Group, and Head of Orange Healthcare, the Group's Healthcare Division that he created in 2007. Orange Healthcare aims to develop e-health activities in France and internationally leveraging the Orange Group's expertise in Information and Communication Technologies. Thierry is a widely recognized thought leader on the transformational impact of new technologies on the healthcare ecosystem. He frequently speaks at a wide range of conferences on the subject of m-Health and e-Health.

He was recognized by the French Magazine L'Usine Nouvelle as "one of the 100 leaders who will transform the Industry in 2011" He previously served as Executive Vice President, in charge of Strategic Partnerships for the Orange Group. He has held various positions inside and outside the Orange Group, among which Senior Vice President of Sales and Marketing for the Major Accounts Division at Orange, General Manager of France Telecom Mexico, which was responsible for managing the French carrier's investments in Telmex and providing Telmex with assistance and advice on its newly deregulated markets. He has also worked as the Head of Marketing for Professional Products and Services at Orange and was in charge of the development of such products as Numeris, PABX, and microcomputer communication.

He was the driving force behind the creation of the THESEUS Institute, a business school dedicated to studying the impact of Information Technology on corporate strategies, where he served as the managing director for several years. He is also a co-founder of the Women's Business Mentoring Initiative, an organisation founded by Stanford Business School alumni which aims to help women entrepreneurs develop business projects in France.

Thierry is a graduate of Stanford University, the École Polytechnique and the École Nationale Supérieure des Télécommunications.